

Overview

Check out the beauty of the American Museum of Western Art for yourself!

Come and take a tour and explore the American West
for yourself!

The museum focuses mainly on early 19th century American Western art to present day, which usually consists of oil paintings; some realistic, some abstract.

The Museum of Western Art is an unique collection you won't be able to see for yourself anywhere else! The only home for the Anschutz Collection is the American Museum of Western Art.

Anschutz Collection

If you or your students are interested in art and American history, then come take a visit to the American Museum of Western Art! Learn more about American Western Art and enjoy the beauty! You can learn many things from studying a piece of artwork.

Ever heard of Philip Anschutz, American entrepreneur? Well, he also owns an art collection. He made his collection available to everyone in 2010. This is his collection shown in a museum - the collection's permanent home.

The art in the American Museum of Western Art represents a cross section of paintings that show the American Western art during the early 19th century through industrialization. The Collection surveys the history of the development of American Art.

About the Museum

The American Museum of Western Art used to be a Girls School, before it was transformed into the museum. The Collection features artwork from two centuries of American Western Art, including art genres such as expressionism, cubism, abstraction, American religionism, and American expressionism.

Open on Mondays and Wednesdays for curated docent-led tours at 10:00 a.m. and 1:30 p.m.; self-guided explorations at 11:45 a.m. and 3:00 p.m. We'd love to have some school groups! Field trips are private reservations on Tuesdays and Thursdays, so students will be the only ones in the museum.
